SOCORRO.

The Mining Center of New Mexico.

Until the last few weeks the town of Socorro had scarcely been heard of outside of the territory, and even at home no one fully appreciated the grand future assumed to the city by the vast wealth hidden in the surrounding mountains. Now the name is heard in all parts of the territory and is beginning to be known throughout the length and breadth of the land.

The reason for this sudden springing into life are obvious; difficult roads and long distances made transportation almost impossible, and had killed almost all business, and had put an effectual embargo on all enterprises requiring the use of all heavy machinery or material. Years ago the mines near the city were known, but could not be profitably worked under the then unfavorable surroundings. A few months ago it became evident that the railroad would be completed to this place during the present summer and a corps of experienced miners swarmed into these long neglected mineral fields. Extraordinary activity in prospecting has been exhibited of late, and at this time there are more locations working, or ready for work, within thirty miles, than in any similar extent of territory in the country which has been prospected for even twice as long.

From J. M. Robins, geologist and mining engineer for the railroad company, and G. E. Patrick, of the University of Kansas, who visited the Magdalena, spending several days there, some facts of general interest have been obtained. They found an immense quantity of mineral, much of which could almost be worked with profit for the lead alone, while all of it carries, silver in greater or less quantities. One lead in particular is mentioned. It was traced for a couple of miles, is many feet in thickness, an average assay giving twelve ounces of silver, and about thirty per cent of lead, so after reduction a ton of the lead would contain about $40 worth of silver. This of course renders this deposit very valuable, while if higher grade of ore be found to be reduced with the product of this vein the value would be proportionally greater with no added cost for transportation of the lead to market. The principal openings on this vein are the Imperial, Jaunita, Graphic and Kelley.

A large number of claims have been located and work is going on all over the district. It is understood that E. S. Stover, of Albuquerque, Mr. Hutchason, of this city, and their associates place a very high price on their claims. It is also stated that a smelter is on the way from Toledo and will soon be erected there.

G. W. Franklin, one of the owners of the Merritt mine is also largely interested in the Magdalena.

A few miles northwest of here the mountains appear to make a bend to the east, and in the angle thus formed in plain sight of town, the now famous Linitar mines are located. The veins are broad, well defined, easily worked and yielding rich returns. Louis Proto, George Norton and other parties are working on their claims. Every person holding a claim, or working on a mine has the most unbounded faith in the future of the mines and that faith appears to be founded, on cold facts.

Four miles east of the town a vein has been discovered which contains a large per cent. of copper and also carries silver ore. This lead has been traced several miles and is found again in the La Joya district. This vein will be worked before long, and will probably be valuable for copper without the added value of silver.

The Socorro mines, three miles from town are too well known to need more than a passing mention. In sight of town are the Merritt and Torrence on which work is pushed rapidly. A little farther north are the mines of the Manzaneros company. Half way up the side of the mountain a white tent shows that some miner is there at work.

The wealth of the Mogollons, to the west, Hillsboro, to the southwest, and White Oaks, to the southeast is conceded and Socorro is the nearest point on the road from which parties can outfit to these districts, and prospectors are taking advantage of this fact and are starting from here to those points.—Sun.

The Cost of Mining Machinery.

As inquiries are frequently made of us touching the cost of mining machinery, in giving what a California exchange gives as the cost of plant for the treatment of the gold ores in Nevada county of that State, we may add that machinery for the reduction of silver ores by milling is more costly than that for gold. The cost of machinery, says the Nevada Transcript, "depends entirely on the quality desired and considered necessary. Hoisting and pumping machinery, buildings, tools, etc., including everything necessary to run a mine, capable to sink from 800 to 1,000 feet deep, all new and in first-class order, will cost in round numbers $10,000. Works can be put up, however, for one-half or less of this amount, capable of working and developing a mine to considerable depth. A ten-stamp mill, buildings and machinery, including all of the latest improvements and labor saving machinery for crushing ore, and saving sulphurets and concentrations, new and in first-class order, will cost in round numbers $10,000. A twenty-stamp mill of like character will cost about $15,000. Each additional stamp, including other necessary additions, $500.—Exchange.

It is a pretty big job to grumble at the United States successfully, but sometimes it becomes necessary to do so, if it does no other good than the satisfying of one's own feelings. The order of Postmaster General Maynard, cutting down the Star mail service on the Fort Bascom line from a daily to a tri-weekly service, went into effect Sunday, and was as unnecessary as it is unjust and inconvenient to a great number of people, who must of necessity depend on this route for their mails. This action of the Department necessitates the discharge of about half the men who have been engaged on the line, and the sale of about half of the stock. The post-office at Chaparrito will be discontinued. The mails on this line hereafter leave Las Vegas on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays. If petitioning will do any good everybody should lead a helping hand.

We have no report this morning, as a glance at this page will show. The reason why we should not have received one, is a question that we are not prepared to answer. The wires were all right; but that did not seem to make any difference; but we were told, by the operator, that Santa Fe had not had a wire for two weeks, consequently the business at that point had to be cleared up before the press report could be started, and we waited until half past two this morning, and could wait no longer, and had to go to press without it.

The Rev. Sheldon Jackson has been commissioned by the government to select eleven children from the Moquis, Pueblos and Apaches of Arizona, to be educated at the Carlisle Indian school, and is now in our sister Territory, making the selections. The loss would be but trifling, were this reverend individual "selected" by some of the Apaches. He would make a good subject for a scalp dance.—Southwest.

Our exchanges from all parts of the territory come to us daily replete with accounts of new and rich mineral discoveries, and every indication points to the often asserted fact that New Mexico must soon take her place at the head of the precious metal producing section of the country. Every mountain range within her borders is being thoroughly prospected with the most surprising and flattering results.

The total votes cast for President in 1824 were 352,662. It is expected that fully 10,000,000 votes will be cast this year, an increase of 3,000 per cent. in half a century. The increase each presidential year is about thirty per cent. over that of the previous election.

The New York Times says that it is rumored that Kelley and Tammany have formed a secret alliance with the Republicans to control the local patronage of the metropolis.

A suit for $25,000 has been brought against the city of Augusta, Ga., for injuries to a child that had been gored by a cow running loose in the streets.

It is suggested that after Dr. Tanner completes his forty days' record he ought to open an academy for the advancement of starvation among tramps. This is offered as a solution to the problem. "What shall we do with our tramps—and Dr. Tanner?"

It is now reported that the Indian Territory is to be invaded from all sides by thousands of settlers, in defiance of the Government order, but nothing is known of it at Washington.
